[From the Missouri Democrat.] THE TURKS AS THEY ABE. LEAF FROM THE JOURNAL OF LIEUT. W D. PORTER.

But one work, translated in English, has as yet appeared before the public, giving the Turkish Alcoran, or Bible. This is full of inaccuracies, and does not detail the mixed religion of the Musselman, which is divided into as many sects as are the Christian denominations. We are all familiar with the fact of the two great factions in the Turkish religionthose who have Mahomet, and those who call Ali their head. The latter are looked upon in the same light as the Chris tians regard the Jews. But there are sects very much resembling the Christians-the Howling Dervishes, for in stance. These may properly be called the Methodists of the Mahomedan church they are only rather more enthusiastic. and their ceremonies characterised by superstitions. To describe them fully. would be utterly impossible, and but a faint description can be given of them at Dervishes; the Howling Dervishes; the turning to his third son, who frankly and Turning Dervishes, or Turkish Shaking openly replied "I have given my peach Quakers; the true followers of Mahomet, to the son of our neighbor-the sick and the followers of Ali; the Begging George, who has had the fever. He would Dervishes, and the Silent Dervishes.

On entering the small and not very have just come away!" "Now," said neat mosque of the Howling Dervishes, the father, "who has done the best with we found several of them already present | peach?" "Brother Edmund!" the three and beginning a low growling chant. In exclaimed aloud; "Brother Edmund!" a few moments, as if animated by the Edmund was still and silent, and the presence of the Christian dogs, several mother kissed him with tears of joy in others joined the singers and raised the her eyes. growl a note or two higher. Their dres consisted of nothing but a pair of loose Turkish trowsers, and a small skull cap on their heads. In this costume, they began to move around, one after another, in a circle; now and then one or two dropping in and joining the dance, which was slow and measured at first, but as their voices rose, the dance became more animated, while their motions resembled the Indian buffalo dance-stooping, jumping and contorting their bodies in every conceivable manner, but the chaunt soon rose to a dismal howl; several juveniles stepped into the dance, and their squeaking voices and quick convulsions of their bodies, gave the whole thing a still more ludicrous appearance. Still louder rose the howl-resembling a combination of the Indian war-whoop, the hoarse moanings of the winds, the growl of some wild beast, the chatter of the monkey and the shrill squeal of the pig. But all these horrible noises were perfectly eclipsed by the contortions of the faces, muscles and body. Their eyes rolled until nothing but the whites could be seen. Their tongues were lapped out of their mouths and frothing, dancing, jumping, crawling, sereaming, rolling, twisting themselves in every conceivable manner, until completely exhausted they fell, some on their faces, others on their sides and backs; and after nature had become apparently restored, they again rose to their feet, began maiming themselves in the most shocking manner w knives, sharp instruments, and again go ing through the same ceremony of how ing, squealing, dancing, and falling insensible; where, laying sometime, they quietly arose and asked the Christian dogs for money, which we, as a matter of course, gave them. The turning Dervishes next attracted our attention : their mosque is plain and spacious. We found some twenty or thirty already on the plain going through their revolving. The dress of this order consists of a conical cap and loose frock of white stuff, and while turning around in their dance they resembled a candle extinguisher. These, too, have a song, but one low and melodious. Their whole ceremony consists in turning round, and by long practice and stretching out their arms, the revolutions of the persons become so rapid that they resemble a cone surrounded by a flat disc. These, too, begged a few favors from the Christian visitors, and we willingly gave it for the privilege of seeing their small fry lions. The dirty Dervishes' religion consists in merely never changing any article of clothing, until it actual drops off in rags: and in remaining, from the date of their entering the order until death, abomina-in a clean place. But it is a very easy matter for a Turk to become a dirty Dervish; though they frequently bathe, they seldom change their clothing. The thoughts, feelings, habits, and manners of the Turks are decidedly of a low order; they have a tew books of light literature, but none on any of the important sciences. He smokes his pipe, drinks his coffee, and lolls in the lap of his wife or slave, dates every thing from Frankinstan, (Christian land,) and dreams of nothing else but a sensual paradise from his earliest years to old age; he is a sensualist, and expects after death to enjoy a sensual paradise. Such is the Turk of the present day, and such he will be while he has as his guide the Koran; he looks upon the whole world with contempt, and whatever misfortune overtakes him-he quietly submits to his kisnet, (fate.) Being not at

"I have eaten mine, and thrown the stone away," said the youngest, "besides which, mother gave me half of hers. Oh! it tasted so sweet and so melting in my mouth." "Indeed," said the father. "thou hast not been prudent. However. it was very natural and childlike, and displays wisdom enough for your years." Cast Marble .- It has long been a desideratum in the adaption of fine art to the refined wants of daily life, as well as for purposes of science, that works of sculpture should be capable of being produced at a cheap rate. Many processes have been tried to render plaster solid: but none has hitherto proved in every respect successful, the requisite degree of transparency not having been obtained Dr. Emil Braun has at length succeeded. we are told, in the production of a ma terial adapted to plastic purposes, which affords the same sharpness of outlines as plaster of Paris, is scarcely inferior in whiteness to the finest statuary marble, and even surpasses it in impermeability of surface, being perfectly impervious to wet, and capable of resisting all inclemencies of weather. The inventor has already exhibited several busts and statues of this composition, which have been viewed by the sculptors and artists of Rome, who are unanimous in their opinion as to the beauty and value of the material, the fracture of which even presents a crystalized structure. This material is as well adapted for the most delicate objects as for works of colossal size; the former exhibiting the utmost refinement of execution, whilst the latter proves that it is capable of resisting any degree of weight arising from the bulk of the objects themselves. In this material fac-similes of the most beautiful monuments of ancient or modern times architectural ornaments, &c., may be reproduced at a price not greatly exceeding that of plaster casts. Thus not only houses and museums, but also gardens and parks, and all open conrt-yards er paces destined for decorative purposes, may be adorned with the finest works of sculpture which the world affords .-

A THRILLING SKETCH .- At a temperance meeting in Philadelphia, some years ago, a learned clergyman spoke in favor of wine as a drink, demonstrating it to his own satisfaction to be scriptural, gentlemanly, and healthful.
